Such is the title of a Dailey newspaper to be published in Louisville, Kentucky; the paper is to be unconditional Union,-giving the Government a hearty and earnest support in suppressing the rebellion.

Saturday Evening American.

We have received Nos. one and two, of a paper with the above title, published weekly at Covington, Kentucky, by Mr. B. F. San ate that statement. FORD, at $2 40 per annum. It is devoted to the interests of the Emancipationists; well printed, and made up in good style.

The School and Family Visitor -- a Monthly Journal for Teachers, Parents, and Children. Official Organ of State Superintendent of Pub-lic Instruction. Edited by W. N. HAILMAN; Louisville, Kentucky; $2 per annum. Such is the title of a periodical just started, and the first number of which is on our table. It is ably edited, and we wish it as great success as the Editor can desire.

Pictorial History of the War for the Union -By Mrs. Ann S. Stephens; in two volumes; James R. Hawley, Cincinnati, Publisher.

This is intended as a complete and reliable history of the war from its commencement to its close: giving a graphic picture of its encounters, thrilling incidents, fright ful scenes, hair-breadth escapes, individual daring, desperate charges, personal anecdotes, etc., gleaned from eye-witnesses of, and participants in, the terrible scenes described-a truthful, living reflex of all matters of interest connected with this, the most gigantic of human struggles; together with a complete chronological analysis of the War; and embellished with over two hundred illustrations.

The first volume has been issued from the press, and Mr. John D. Pollard, is now receiving subscriptions at his Literary Depot, opposite the Commonwealth Office.

We have examined the volume carefully, and perused a considerable postion of it. It is certainly the best written history of the struggle for the Union, that has yet come under our observation. Its gifted and popular author, Mrs. Stephens, is known as one of the best female writers of the age; and her powers of description, and talent in one of the most thrilling interest.

The Philopena.

"I like you the best, Mr. Abingdon; bu I think when I grow up I shall marry Cous-in Hulbert." So spoke the enfant terrible of the household, standing on tip-toe to get at some nuts left upon the dessert table, with her five year old eyes. Oh, how sharp they were fixed upon me, and repeating her words slowly—"I like you the best, but when I'm grown I think I shall marry Hul-

"Why? Oh, he has lots and lots of money, and you haven't.

Whew! How do you know I haven't?' "Aunt Matilda says so. She told Kate this very morning in her bedroom, and that if she married you she'd—she'd—oh, I re-member—she'd starve in a garret. Before that I meant to marry you when I growed

A revelation. It was true-I was sure of that. What Dolly heard she repeated verba-tim, and generally at the most inappropriate times. A week before she had revealed to Mrs. Dix-the fashionable Mrs. Dix-that Aunt Matilda was frying flapjacks in the kitchen. She had uttered all those frightful remarks common to the enfant terrible as to "Aunt's false teeth" and "Uncle's wig." She heard much, listening like a young owl and repeating it days after with a suddenness that foiled interruption to the very party to whom of all others she should not have

So Mrs. Guion thought Katy would starve in a garret if she marries me. Pleasant. And she proposed Cousin Hulburt as a sub-Pleasanter still-delightful altosaid! I would too.

"Come here, Dolly," I said coaxingly. "Yes, when I get my almonds." She filled her pockets-there were three crimson carpet. I took her upon my knee, it and adored it. and talked to her as she munched.

"What did Katy say, Dolly?"
"I don't want to tell you."

"Why? 'You' ll be mad."
